PHAN'S
CUSTOM TAILOR

A new website for Phan's

Kimlien with Thinh and Thuong Phan at the villa, Saigon Pearl
October 2026

TheWebxite

Dear Thinh and Thuong,

Thank you for looking at the mock-up and wanting to take it further. Kimlien is at the villa today to go through it with you: how the new site looks, what the first phase includes, how we move over from the current site, and what we'll need from you.

TheWebxite designs and builds websites for companies, including multinationals and listed companies. For Phan's, we want a website that lives up to what your customers already write about you.

Ask Kimlien anything. If something needs a fuller answer, I'll send it in writing straight after the meeting.

“Finding a truly exceptional tailor is a rare feat, but finding one that pairs flawless technical precision with genuinely warm, selfless hospitality is nearly impossible.”

Benjamin C., Vancouver · Tripadvisor, June 2026

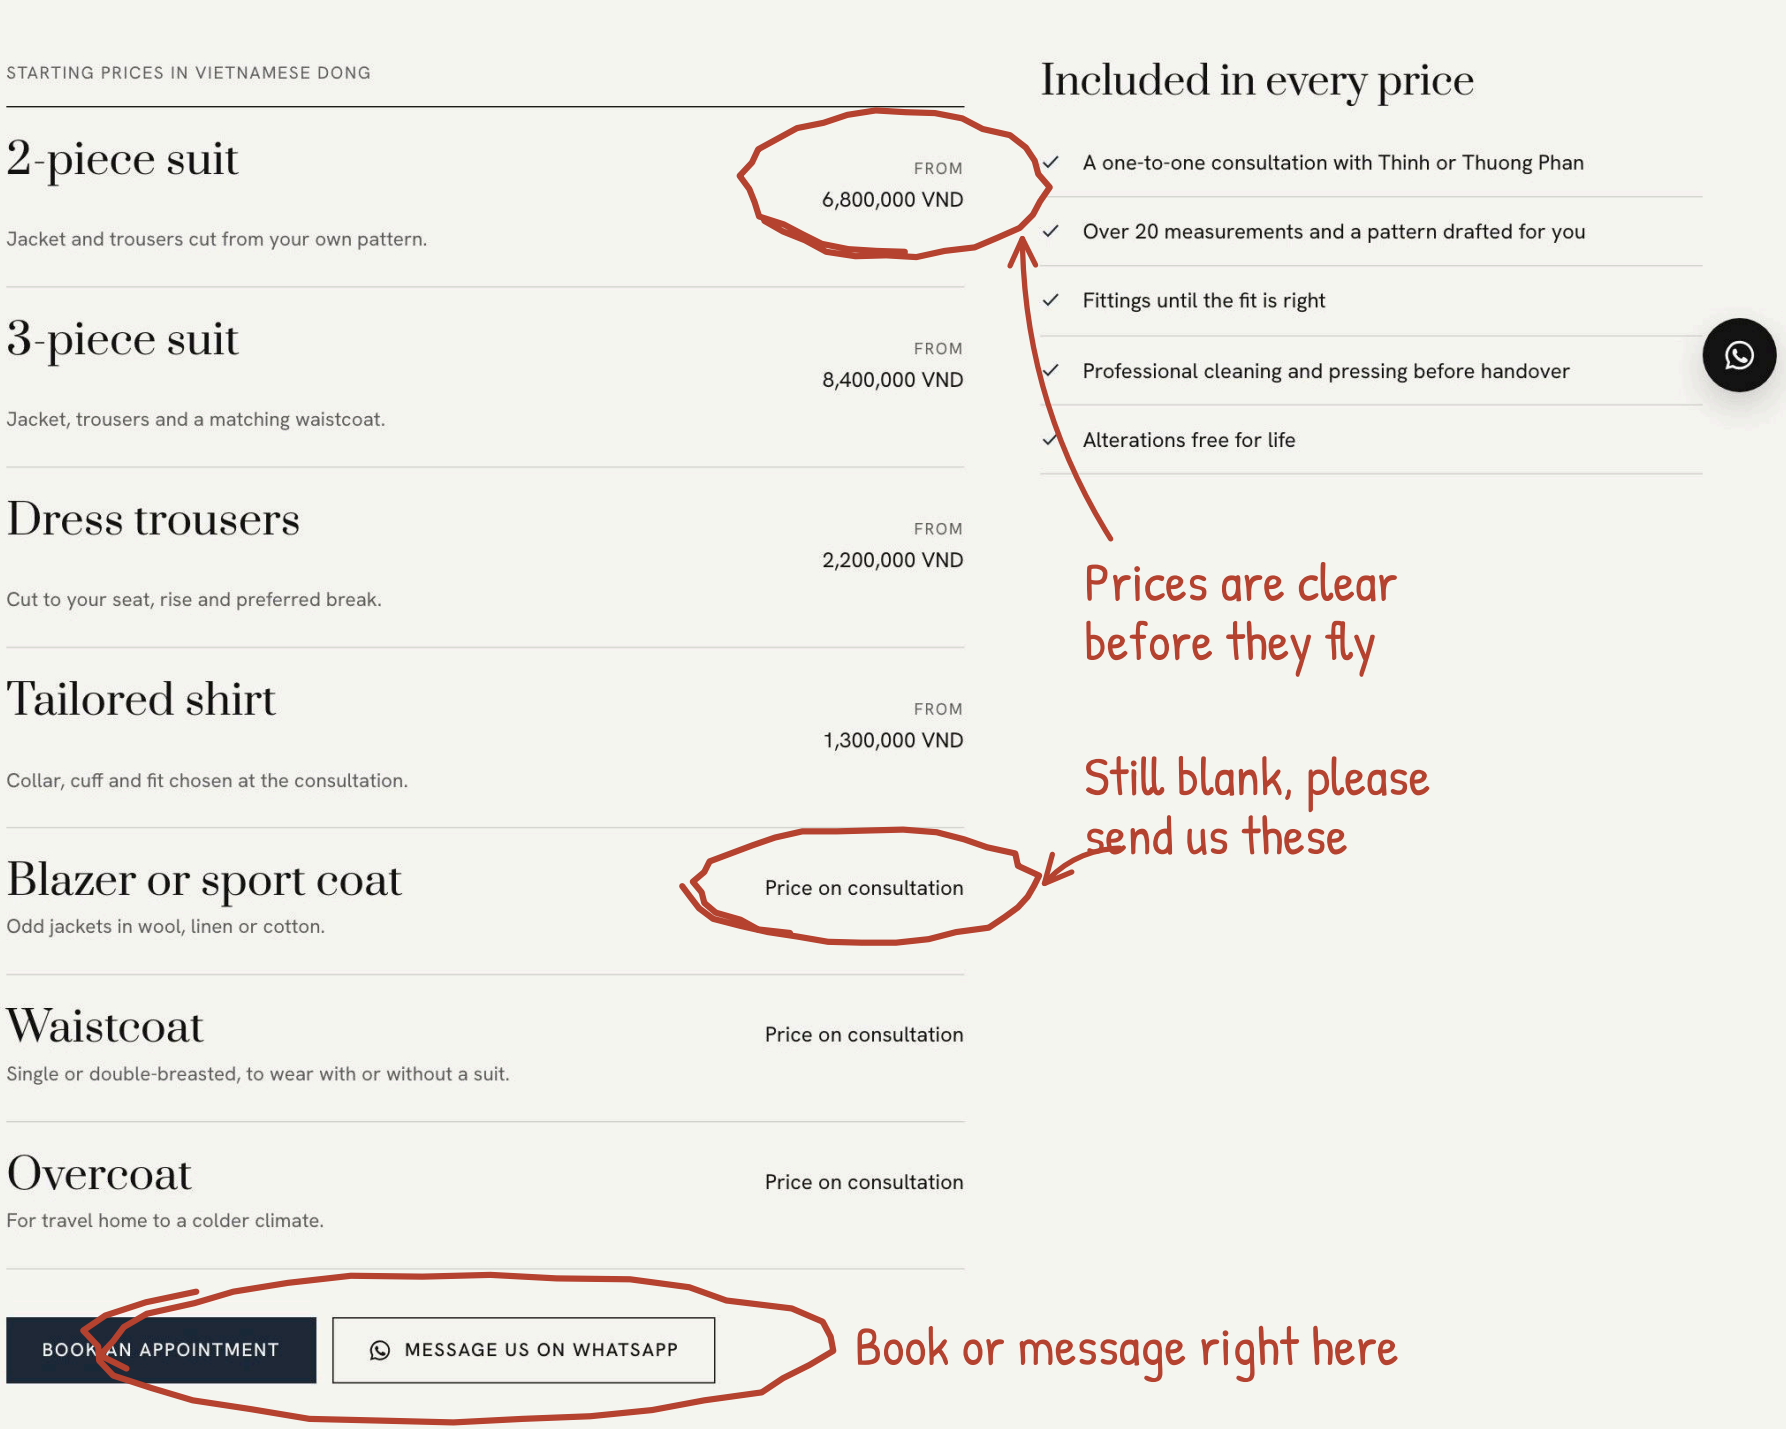

Overseas customers look Phan's up before they fly. The website is where they meet you first, so it has to be as good as the suit.

The home page

It opens on Phan's own photograph. No slogans, nothing extra. Visitors go straight to suits, shirts, cloth or booking.

Prices

The first thing people ask before the trip is what a suit costs. This page answers it, along with what the price includes: fittings and free alterations for life.

The prices come from your current site. For the blank ones, just send us the figures.

Three languages, on a phone

English comes first because most customers are from overseas, with Vietnamese and Chinese alongside. Switching language keeps the visitor on the same page.

We translate all three ourselves. You only need someone to read through the Vietnamese.

Contact and booking

Today, and next

The same villa, the same suits. What changes is the first time a customer sees Phan's online.

The new site, in Vietnamese

Booking stays as it is

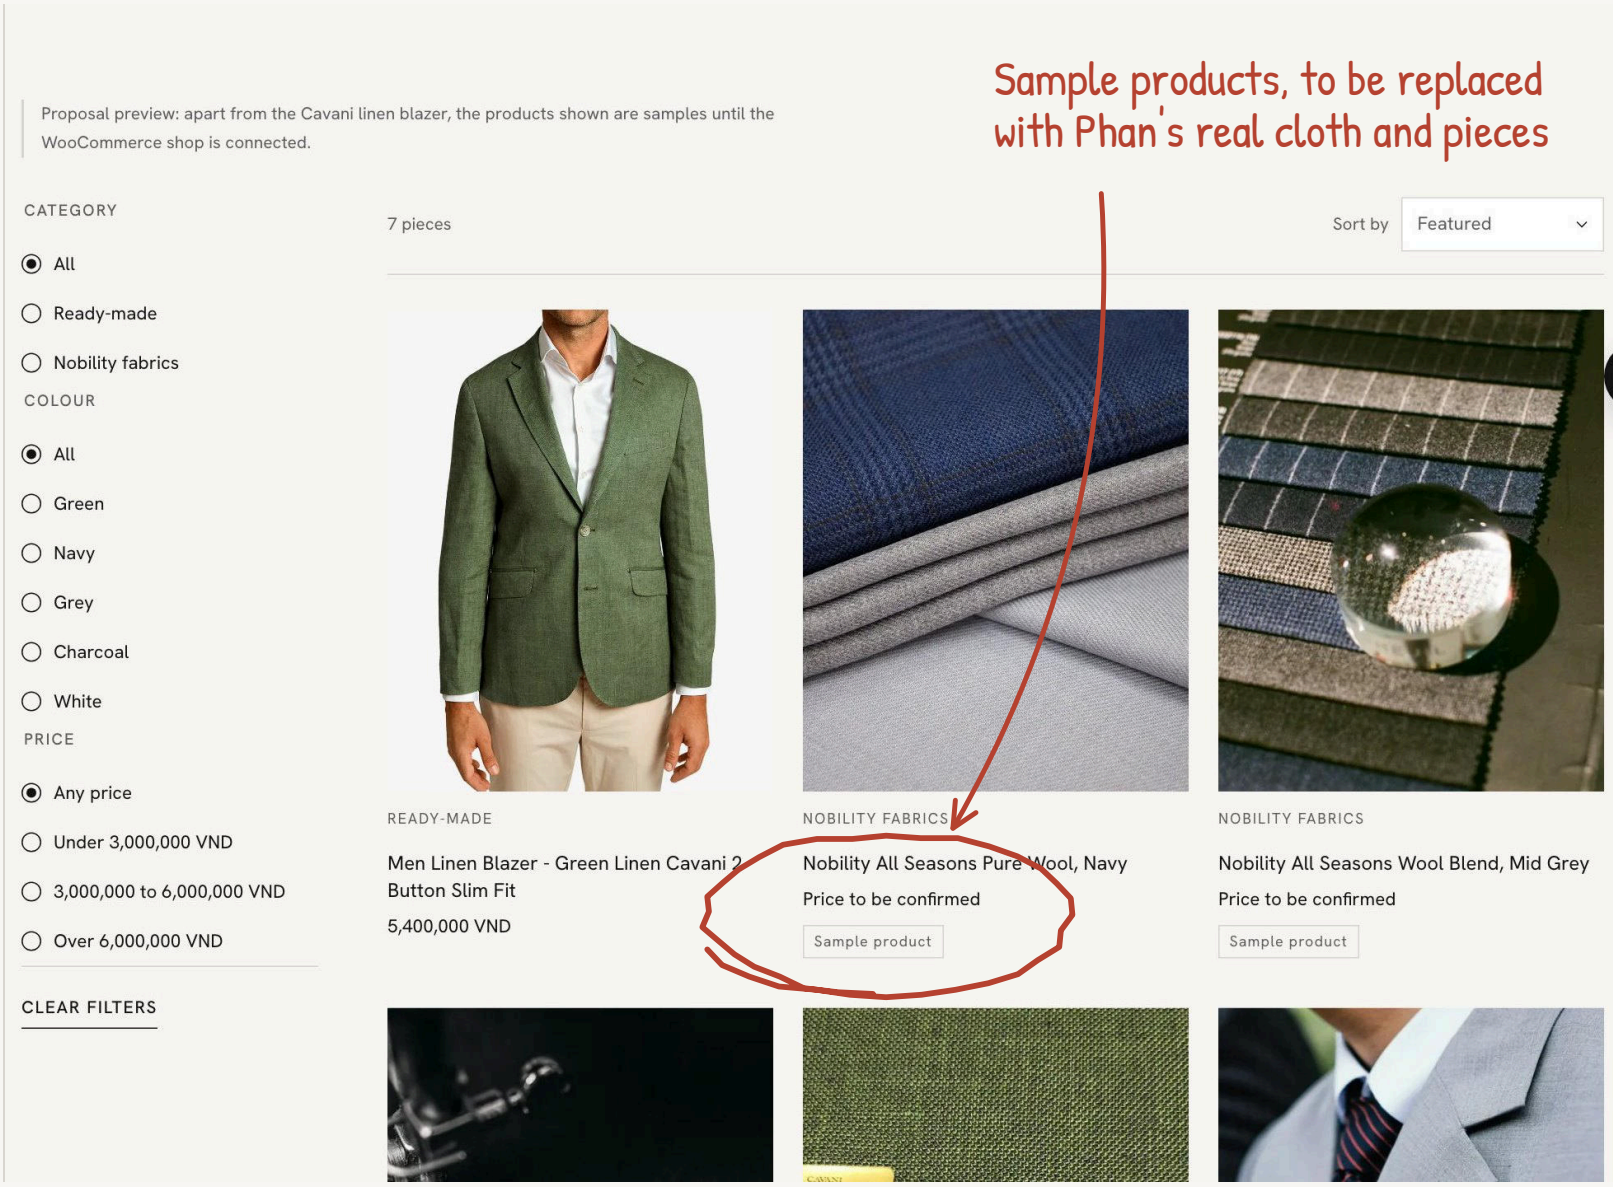

As on your current site, customers pick a day and time to come in for measuring right on the Contact page, using the Koalendar calendar you already have. There's a booking button on every page, and appointments still arrive in Koalendar, managed as you do now.

Does the shop need online payment?

Not at first. Customers browse Nobility cloth and ready-made pieces, then message or book a visit. For made-to-measure, they still come in to be measured.

Selling online needs someone on orders every day, packing, overseas shipping, returns and a payment gateway such as OnePay or VNPay. When you're ready, that's a later phase.

Domain and hosting, in plain words

The domain is the address

Phan's already owns phanscustomtailor.com, the name on your Google Maps listing. We suggest it as the main address, with tailormadesuit.net forwarding to it. No new domain to buy, and it always stays in Phan's name.

Hosting is the house

Where the content and photos live so the site is open 24/7. TheWebxite handles it all: buying it, security, backups, updates. The servers sit in many countries, so it loads fast wherever the customer is.

Email stays put info@phantailor.com lives elsewhere and isn't touched. The Haravan site keeps running until switch-over day, and old Google links lead to the matching new pages.

phanscustomtailor.com tailormadesuit.net and the old links all lead here

The website is the house. The 3D work can be a beautiful room inside it.

You mentioned you're working with a Web 3D team. The two don't overlap. We're happy to work with them and give their experience its own page on the site.
