Presenter notes for Kimlien

Goes with the in-person proposal. Internal, not for the client.

1	Cover	Greet them, thank them. Say today takes about 20 minutes, then questions.
2	Xin's letter	Let them read it. Mention that Xin answers hard questions in writing afterwards.
3	975	Main point: overseas customers look them up before the trip. Ask: where do customers usually find Phan's?
4	Home page	If possible, open the live mock-up and let them tap the menu and switch language.
5	Prices	Point at the blank prices (blazer, waistcoat, overcoat, women's). Ask for them and VND vs USD. Note it down.
6	Three languages	Ask who at Phan's can read the Vietnamese.
7	Today and next	Don't criticise the old site; let them compare.
8	Booking	Confirm the current Koalendar link and who manages it.
9	Shop	If they want online sales now: note it, say Xin will send options and cost for a later phase. No dates.
10	Domain	Ask which domain they want as main and who holds the domain account. Stress that email isn't affected.
11	3D team	Ask for the 3D team's contact if they want us to coordinate.
12	Phases	Ask if they'd add or drop anything.
13	What we need	Go through the four groups and ask when they can send them. Not needed today.
14	Timeline	A week from when everything arrives. No fixed launch date.
15	Close	Let them scan the QR. Close: Xin sends the quote after the meeting. Thank them.

Don't promise

- No specific price; Xin sends the quote.
- Don't bring up the AI fitting room. If asked: it's being tested, Xin will follow up.
- Don't promise online sales, a self-edit admin panel or a fixed launch date.

After the meeting

After the meeting, send Xin: what they agreed, the main domain, the missing prices, unanswered questions, and when they'll send photos and details.

More detail (domain/hosting explanations, likely questions): see Call-briefing-Kimlien-EN.pdf.
